

Convolutional neural networks for semantic segmentation

Abstract: Semantic segmentation is the problem of assigning a semantic class to each pixel of a given image. This talk will present an overview of methods for solving this problem by adapting convolutional neural networks trained for the image classification task. The focus will be on technical explanation of main techniques from academic literature. Applications and related problems in computer vision will also be discussed.